

Table of contents

“Governance of Security” – Monitoring contemporary security issues	9
---	----------

Appreciating Approximation. Using common offence concepts to facilitate police and judicial cooperation in the EU	15
--	-----------

Wendy De Bondt and Gert Vermeulen

1	Introduction	15
1.1	Approximation	15
1.2	Authors' views	16
1.3	Choice of case studies	20
2	Case study 1: Mutual recognition	21
2.1	The principle of mutual recognition	21
2.2	The double criminality requirement	22
2.3	The inappropriate use of the approximation acquis	24
3	Case study 2: Europol and Eurojust	26
3.1	EU level actors and their mandate	26
3.2	The inappropriate use of the approximation acquis	27
4	Case study 3: European Criminal Records Information System	29
4.1	Exchanging criminal records information	29
4.2	Inappropriate use of the approximation acquis	29
5	EULOCS: Appreciating Approximation	30
5.1	EULOCS' background	32
5.2	EULOCS' added value for the case studies	33
6	Conclusion	34
7	Bibliography	35
7.1	Selected legal and policy documents	35
7.2	Literature	38

Approximation and mutual recognition of procedural safeguards of suspects and defendants in criminal proceedings throughout the European Union	41
---	-----------

Gert Vermeulen and Laurens van Puyenbroeck

1	General introduction	43
2	Criminal procedure within the EU: status questionis	45
2.1	Introduction	45
2.2	Approximation of criminal procedure vs. mutual recognition	45
2.3	The link between mutual recognition and procedural safeguards	47
2.4	Towards approximation of procedural rights of suspects and defendants: the proposal for a framework decision	47
3	Is there need for EU action in the field of procedural rights in criminal proceedings?	49
3.1	Introduction	49
3.2	The (in)adequacy of the ECHR framework	49
3.3	Towards a free movement of evidence: what with procedural rights?	50

3.4	The breakdown of mutual recognition: mutual trust vs. the resurrecting dominance of domestic procedures	52
4	From minimum approximation to mutual recognition of procedural rights	55
4.1	Minimum approximation of procedural rights at EU level	55
4.2	Approximation of procedural rights on a higher level	56
4.3	Towards genuine mutual recognition of procedural guarantees	60
5	Conclusion	61
6	Main references	62

Shaping the competence of Europol. An FBI perspective 63

Alexandra De Moor and Gert Vermeulen

1	Introduction	63
2	The Competence of Europol	64
2.1	Introducing: Europol	64
2.2	Extending the competence of Europol	66
2.3	Defining the competence of Europol	71
3	The Competence of Europol in Comparative Perspective	76
3.1	Introducing the FBI	76
3.2	The competence of the FBI	78
4	Conclusion	83
5	Bibliography	85
5.1	Legal and policy documents (in chronological order)	85
5.2	Literature (in alphabetical order)	89

Towards a coherent EU policy on outgoing data transfers for use in criminal matters? The adequacy requirement and the framework decision on data protection in criminal matters. A transatlantic exercise in adequacy 95

Els De Busser and Gert Vermeulen

1	The need for coherency	95
2	Before the framework decision	97
2.1	Limited rules on data transfers to third states or institutions	97
2.2	The adequacy requirement: not generally binding and diverse implementation	98
3	Inadequacy based on purpose deviation	102
3.1	Purpose limitation to purpose deviation	102
3.2	Adequacy of the American level of data protection	104
3.3	Transatlantic purpose deviation	105
3.4	Inadequate transatlantic cooperation in criminal matters	108
4	The significance of the adequacy requirement in the framework decision	108
4.1	The weight of the adequacy requirement in the framework decision	109
4.2	The scope of the framework decision	110
4.3	Effects of the framework decision on existing and future provisions	111
5	The future of adequacy: from Vienna to Stockholm via Washington	112
5.1	From Vienna to the Hague	113
5.2	The transatlantic journey	113
5.3	Adequate transatlantic alliances in the future?	114

6	Conclusion: coherency with a twist	116
7	Bibliography	117
	Policy and legal documents	117
	Council of Europe	117
	European Union	118
	United States	121
	Case law	122
	The international private security industry as part of the European Union security framework: a critical assessment of the French EU presidency White Paper	123
	Marc Cools, Dusan Davidovic, Hilde De Clerck and Eddy De Raedt
1	Introduction	123
2	The French EU presidency, the private security in France and the security discourse of Nicolas Sarkozy	124
3	The genesis of the white paper by INHES and CoESS and its content	126
4	A critical assessment of the white paper	132
	4.1 A critical scientific reflection	132
	4.2 A hard political fact for the future	133
	4.3 The visionary and brave private security industry in Europe	134
	4.4 'Another' critical criminological farewell	134
5	Bibliography	136
	The anti money laundering complex on a crime control continuum: perceptions of risk, power and efficacy	143
	Antoinette Verhage	143
1	Introduction	143
2	Factors typifying the AML approach	145
3	Diversity of interests at the introduction of AML	147
	3.1 Crime fighting and power limitation	148
	3.2 Financial stability and trust	148
4	The interpretation of 'formal control' in AML	150
	4.1 Why private organisations?	150
	4.2 The 'banking detectives': compliance officers and their discretionary powers	152
5	The specificities of the phenomenon of money laundering	153
	5.1 (Lack of) historical knowhow	153
	5.2 Different origins of criminalisation	154
	5.3 Flexibility	154
6	The autocracy of 'risk' within the AML complex	155
	6.1 The risk-based approach in AML	155
	6.2 AML as a risk for banks	157
7	Thoughts on efficacy of the AML complex	158
	7.1 Effects?	158
	7.2 Crime control and hence displacement?	159
8	Discussion: the place of AML on a crime control continuum	161

8.1	AML as imposed regulation	161
8.2	Public-private divide	162
8.3	Knowhow and cooperation	162
9	In conclusion	163
10	Bibliography	164
Police officers' views and fears about some criminals' threatening reactions to police investigations		169
Fien Gilleir
1	Introduction	169
2	Focus on the notions of 'organized crime' and 'counterstrategies'	170
2.1	The phenomenon of organized crime	170
2.2	Counterstrategies	171
3	Empirical research	174
4	Research results	175
4.1	The criminal organization	175
4.2	Violence and intimidation	176
5	Conclusion	179
6	Bibliography	180
Police torture in China and its causes		185
Wei Wu and Tom Vander Beken
1	Introduction	185
2	Police torture in criminal investigation	186
2.1	Definition	186
2.2	The phenomenon	188
2.3	Evolution of torture techniques	189
2.4	The role of police stations	189
2.5	Weak victims	190
2.6	Wrongful convictions	190
3	Explaining torture	191
3.1	The law	192
3.2	Organisation and structure	197
3.3	Culture	202
4	Discussion	204
5	Bibliography	206
Authors		217
Participating Reviewers		219